The 50 Greatest Films of All Time

Sight & Sound, an international film magazine published by EIDR Member company the British Film Institute, regularly polls film critics, programmers, academics, and distributors to rank the best films of all time, covering all of world cinema from the silent era to the present. In their most recent poll to rank the 50 best films ever made, Orson Wells' Citizen Kane (1941) lost its 50-year hold on the top slot, slipping to number 2 and giving way to Alfred Hitchcock's Vertigo (1958).

The 1950s and 1960s are the best represented decades among the top 50, with 13 films each. The 1950s are represented by films ranging from Japan's Rashomon (1950) to America's Some Like It Hot (1959), while the 1960s include such notables as Italy's La dolce vita (1960) and the UK's 2001: A Space Odyssey (1968). The most represented year overall is 1927 with 4 entries on the list: The General, Metropolis, La Passion de Jeanne d'Arc, and Sunrise: A Song of Two Humans, representing comedy, science fiction, costume drama, and morality play.

All 52 movies on Sight & Sound's list of the 50 best movies of all time have a corresponding EIDR ID. For a complete list, please click here. (And, yes, the list of the 50 best movies of all time does contain 52 films and somehow the word "lieutenant" contains an "f." It's all very British.)
